Introduction

Learning Outcomes:

LO1. Demonstrate an understanding of machine learning and deep learning concepts for problem-solving.

LO2. Create reports, dashboards, and visualizations using Tableau.

LO3. Implement solution by integrating the applications of machine learning and visualization for storytelling and prescriptive analytics

Objective:

To demonstrate an understanding of machine learning and deep learning concepts for fraud detection, create insightful reports and visualizations using Tableau, and implement an integrated solution that combines machine learning with data visualization for effective storytelling and prescriptive analytics.

Dataset Name: Synthetic Financial Datasets for Fraud Detection

Description: This dataset simulates mobile money transactions based on a real-life dataset from a financial provider. It is suitable for detecting fraudulent behaviors in mobile money transactions, offering a variety of features such as transaction type, amount, and whether the transaction was flagged as fraud.

Understanding Machine Learning Concepts for Fraud Detection Using Synthetic Financial Data (LO1) (35 Marks)

- Describe the importance of fraud detection in financial transactions and explain why synthetic datasets are used (e.g., privacy concerns, availability of real data). Highlight the benefits and limitations of using synthetic data. (10 Marks)
- Select a suitable machine learning model for fraud detection (e.g., Logistic Regression, Random Forest, Gradient Boosting, Neural Networks, or Anomaly Detection techniques). Explain the rationale behind your choice, considering the characteristics of synthetic data, such as distribution and feature variability. (10 Marks)
- Implement the chosen model using Python on a synthetic financial dataset. Provide the code and detail each step: data preprocessing (handling class imbalance, scaling features), training, and model evaluation. Include evaluation metrics like Precision, Recall, F1-Score, and AUC-ROC. (15 Marks)

Creating Fraud Detection Reports and Visualizations Using Tableau (LO2) (30 Marks)

- Import the synthetic financial dataset and model results into Tableau. Ensure data preparation is done correctly for accurate visualization, then develop the following interactive dashboards:
 - a) Displays transaction volumes, fraud rates, and key trends in the synthetic dataset.(10 Marks)
 - b) Highlights patterns of fraud with filters for transaction type, amount, and account features. (10 Marks)
 - c) Visualizes model metrics like confusion matrix and Precision-Recall curves to assess fraud detection effectiveness. (10 Marks)

Integrating Machine Learning and Visualization for Storytelling and Prescriptive Analytics in Fraud Detection (LO3) (35 Marks)

- a) Use Tableau dashboards to narrate fraud detection, covering data exploration, model results, and insights. (15 Marks)
- b) Propose actionable steps to prevent fraud, highlighting real-world applications for financial institutions. (10 Marks)
- c) Discuss limitations of synthetic data and suggest improvements to enhance model realism and effectiveness. (10 Marks)

Submission Guidelines:

Prepare a comprehensive report showcasing your Tableau design and machine learning integration:

- Include screenshots or links to Tableau dashboards and visualizations.
- Justify design choices, explaining how each visualization contributes to understanding customer segments and their behaviors.
- Demonstrate interactive features used to explore different aspects of the customer dataset and clustering results.

- Implement clustering analysis in a programming language of your choice and integrate it with Tableau.
- Develop a storytelling narrative within Tableau, walking through the problem, solution, and insights derived from the integrated machine learning model and visualization techniques.
